B. Yemen likewise is considering opening diplomatic relations with the USSR.

III. Meanwhile, meeting of the seven Arab foreign ministers in Cairo (9-14 Oct) accomplished little and provided no surprises, although atmosphere was evidently favorable to doing business with the Soviet bloc.

IV. Along the "northern tier," Iran's announced intention (12 Oct) to adhere to Baghdad pact (Turkey, Iraq, Pakistan, Britain) has brought loud public objections from USSR.

A. Soviets have again suggested that Iranian adherence would be violation of 1921 and 1927 Iranian-Soviet friendship treaties, have hinted darkly at consequences.

B. Although no evidence that USSR plans to threaten Iran with use of force, Soviet disfavor being made clear.

V. In present Middle East picture, instability of Syria poses particularly serious problem for West.

A. US Embassy Damascus, in 14 Oct assessment of situation, while finding no actually new factors, sees a continuing decline in stability and Western influence in Syria.

1. This is result of inability of pro-Western elements to work together in face of enthusiastic determination of neutralist and leftist elements.
2. Embassy opines that leftist influence may become strong enough to defeat even a determined effort to reorient Syria toward West.

B. Present political climate in Syria is favorable to Bloc offers of aid (which apparently have been made, and in which Egypt is reportedly interested in functioning as middleman).

1. According to "Alif Ba" (independent and reputable Damascus daily) Soviets and Czechs are interested in selling arms directly to Syria, rather than through Egypt.
2. Soviets reportedly asked why Syria, "an independent and courageous state," would fear to buy Bloc arms.
3. When Syrians replied that Ankara opposed such purchases as an aggressive act against Turkey, Soviet representative claimed that USSR was prepared to guarantee Syrian independence at any time.

4. Whether or not this press report is true, statement is of type that tends to rouse Syrian nationalism and invites Syrians to explore further benefits of doing business with USSR.
- C. A side reaction has appeared in neighboring Iraq, where Prime Minister Nuri professes to be particularly alarmed by prospects of growing Communist influence in Syria and has asked US and Britain for a "free hand" to deal with problem.
 1. The Iraqis probably have some kind of Syrian-Iraqi union in mind, an old dream to which prime minister and crown prince are much attached.
 2. Iraqis have promised to do nothing "precipitous," but have been given some encouragement by Britain.
- VI. As expected, USSR has broadened its aid offers from arms to general economic development.
 - A. Soviet ambassador in Cairo announced on 10 October that USSR is ready to give all such aid Arab states may need.
 - B. [REDACTED] USSR has offered to help Egypt finance its billion-dollar-plus "high dam" at Aswan at an interest rate of 2 percent.
 - C. Czechs have asked for specifications on Lebanon's Litani river project, apparently with intent of entering the bidding.

1. In line with this, US Embassy Cairo notes that USSR might back such a plan, as an alternative to Jordan Valley scheme.

D.
25X1C

- E. Such actions indicate a long-range Soviet policy of penetration in Middle East, over and above shorter-range objective of undermining "Northern Tier" from the rear.
